COPPER IN NOVEMBER 2005

Average daily copper mine production in November was essentially unchanged from that of October, according to data compiled by the U.S. Geological Survey. Production in November, however, remained 20% below that for November 2004 owing predominantly to strike activity at Asarco Incorporated's mines in Arizona (see Copper in October 2005) and lower production from Kennecott Utah Copper Co.'s Bingham Canyon Mine. Kennecott altered its mine plan to process ore containing higher molybdenum values at the expense of copper in order to take advantage of high molybdenum prices (Rio Tinto plc, 2006, p. 4). Average daily refined copper production in November, however, rose by about 5% to the highest level of the year.

Average daily consumption of refined copper in November was 3% below that for October and 6% below that for November 2004. Despite this, the U.S. market for semifabricates showed some renewed strength. According to the American Bureau of Metal Statistics, Inc. (ABMS), U.S. shipments of copper and copper alloy mill products, though down in November (a seasonally weak month) by 6.8% from those in October, were up by 11.5% compared with shipments in November 2004. Year-on-year shipments through November 2005, however, were down by 2.5%. Copper tube shipments for the first 9 months of the year were up by 0.5% from those for the same period in 2004; sheet and strip shipments were down by 5.9%; and rod and bar shipments were down by 6.8%. According to ABMS wire-rod shipment data, U.S. apparent consumption of wire rod declined by 8.5% from that in October, but remained 7.5% above those for November 2004. Year-to-date apparent consumption of rod in 2005 was essentially unchanged from that of the previous year, yet shipments from U.S. mills were down by almost 6%. The disparity was attributed to a 131% increase in net imports of wire rod to 206,000 metric tons (t) in 2005 from 89,000 t in 2004 (American Bureau of Metal Statistics, Inc., 2006 a, b).
