PLATINUM-GROUP METALS IN AUGUST 2014

Engelhard's average August prices for platinum and ruthenium each decreased by 3% and average prices for palladium and iridium increased slightly compared with average July prices. The average monthly rhodium price increased by 17% during the same period, reportedly in response to increased industrial and investor demand. Daily prices for platinum fluctuated early in the month and then decreased before leveling off at monthend. Palladium prices decreased early in the month and then generally trended upward toward monthend in response to ongoing tensions in Ukraine. For several days in August, the palladium price was above $900 per troy ounce for the first time since 2001. Rhodium prices increased sharply toward midmonth, and were above those for platinum for several days for the first time since December 2011. Rhodium prices then decreased toward monthend and were again below those for platinum.

Platinum mines in South Africa were ramping up production following a 5-month labor strike that ended in June 2014. Anglo American Platinum Ltd. (Johannesburg) expected to complete its rampup by late September, Impala Platinum Holdings Ltd. (Johannesburg) by early October, and Lonmin plc (London, United Kingdom) by December (Bishop, 2014).
